State why the candidate merits election to the U.S. National Ski & Snowboard Hall of Fame:
(More detail can be found on following pages)

Gwen Allard is a visionary who dreams big and then brings people together to make things happen. She has forged a lifetime career in snowsports, holding numerous leadership positions at the regional and national level.

Her career has been multi-faceted, but her primary contributions have come in the field of Adaptive, where her tireless promotion of the discipline and development of programs and standards created a greater awareness and acceptance of the discipline within the snowsports community. In this role, she has touched the lives of thousands of trainers, instructors and students.

As noted in the chronology and information on the following pages, she was a key player in PSIA/AASI recognizing Adaptive as a major discipline and taking over all training and certification operations, examiner training, development of standards and written materials, and creation of an annual national educational event.

She founded two major Adaptive programs and assisted in developing several others.

Beyond Adaptive, she has had an impact on Alpine, Nordic, Adaptive Snowboarding, and Seniors.

For PSIA/AASI, she helped to greatly improve levels of communication and the sharing of best practices. She was also involved with writing and reviewing articles for periodicals and manuals.

She has been a participant in Industry groups concerning safety and risk awareness, liability insurance, and environmental concerns.

Gwen has travelled to divisions and resorts throughout the country, to share her knowledge through clinics and exams.

Near the end of the Chronology, is a listing of awards and recognition she has earned from national and regional groups for her efforts.

In chronological order by year, list the candidate's achievements.

- Mid-1960's – present: Gwen began teaching skiing and has been associated with several areas during her career.
- Early 1970's: Gwen developed an interest in teaching Adaptive Snowsports. To increase her knowledge, she sought the expertise of Bruce Gavett, an early pioneer in the field, who served as a mentor.
- Mid 1970's: Founded the Gore Mt. Adaptive Program, one of the earlier such programs.
- * Developed a ski instructor training course at Skidmore College for credit, a unique concept at the time.
- 1974: Earned full PSIA (Level 3) certification.
- 1975-1980: She became the first full time Executive Director for PSIA-Eastern.
- * Worked to bring disparate Nordic groups and individuals in the East together under PSIA-E and thus completing PSIA's National goal of bringing Nordic certification under its wing.
 - * Establishing herself as a capable leader and supporter of a stronger national association, Gwen was chosen to chair meetings of executives from all 9 divisions at national functions and represent them at the National Board Level. This allowed her to develop a network of influential national leaders in the ski business.
- 1981-1984: Established PSIA-E Educational Foundation; served as Executive Director and fund raiser.
- * As risk awareness was gaining traction, Gwen worked with Werner Schuster to develop the first significant safety manual for NSAA.
 - * Served as a resort inspector for Willis Insurance Group one season.
 - * As environmental awareness was becoming more predominant within the industry, Gwen chaired a national group of PSIA, NSP, SIA, and ASF to develop educational materials on this topic.
- 1983-2003: Established another Education Foundation for her newly established Adaptive Sports Foundation at Windham, NY, for which she served as Executive Director. Still on Board.
- See following page for more detail on this.
- 1983-84: Co-chair of the NY State Select Committee on Winter Sports for the Disabled where she helped develop a reference guide of accessible recreational facilities in the state.
- 1984+: Gwen started working with DS-USA, which led to PSIA/AASI recognition of Adaptive.
- See following page for more detail on this.
- 1987-1988: PSIA/AASI and its divisions took over training and certification of Adaptive teachers.
- 1996-2002: Gwen served as the first Chairperson of the National Adaptive committee.
- * She was a primary author and editor in developing Adaptive manuals in 1997 and 2003.
 - * PSIA/AASI recognized Ski Spectacular at Breckenridge as the Annual Adaptive Academy.
- 1985+: She started a successful seasonal Senior program at Windham, and another at Killington. Authored one of the early Senior manuals, presented at a national senior seminar at Mammoth Mtn. CA, and promoted the need to address keeping seniors involved in the sport as they age.
- 1988: Certificate of Association Management from the University of Delaware and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.
- 1989: B.A. from Russell Sage College in Troy, NY, at 51.
- 1990: Developed a "turnkey" Adaptive Program Outline for resorts wishing to start programs.
- * ADA was passed by Congress and Gwen became a consultant interpreting the law and educating the snowsports community on how to comply with its provisions.
- 1991: Gwen strongly petitioned PSIA/AASI to add an Adaptive skier to the US Demo Team for the St. Anton Interski. Paralympic gold medalist ('97 Hall Inductee) Diana Golden was chosen and wowed the participants. The national team has had an Adaptive member ever since. Geoff Krill, current Adaptive Team coach received encouragement from Gwen as he rose through the ranks.
- 1997: Founded the Double H Adaptive Program.
- See following page for more detail on this.
- * After Snowboard was recognized as a PSIA/AASI major discipline, Gwen and her committee, along with the Snowboarding community, developed new Adaptive Snowboard standards.
- 1998: PSIA-E & EF Recognition for Exemplary Service 1975-1998
- Jan. 1999: Received the James L. Winthers award from DS-USA for outstanding service to the Adaptive Discipline.
- Oct. 1999: Awarded Lifetime membership in both National and Eastern PSIA/AASI. (continued...)

Dec. 2001: Named to the National Disabled Skiing Hall of Fame.

2002: PSIA/AASI Educational Excellence Award (One of the organization's most prestigious awards).

* PSIA/AASI Recognition for service as National Adaptive Chair

Jan. 2006: The Adaptive Sports Foundation named their new building "The Gwen Allard Adaptive Center".

Feb. 2004; Recognition from President George W. Bush, NY State Governor Pataki, and NY City Mayor Bloomberg for 20+ years of outstanding contributions to the Adaptive community in NY.

Dec. 2015: Received the PSIA-E Einar Aas Award for Excellence in Snowsports School Management.

* Received the PSIA-E Examiner Excellence Award.

2019: Gwen was honored by having a trail at the Double H Ranch named after her; "Gwen's Fun Run".

On one page provide additional data, anecdotes, etc. that you feel are pertinent to this nomination:

After becoming Executive Director of PSIA-Eastern, Gwen recognized many issues that could not be adequately addressed by PSIA's nine divisions and she became an advocate for strong national leadership, and working with other organizations, such as NSAA. She was also an early adapter of computerization, well before other divisions and before off-the-shelf programs were available.

ADAPTIVE SPORTS FOUNDATION: The PSIA-E EF office was relocated to Windham, NY, where Gwen took over a fledgling Adaptive program. With supportive resort management, and her ability to develop an impressive base of fundraising, the program prospered, to the point that she founded a new 501(c)(3), the Adaptive Sports Foundation, now a nationally recognized and one of the largest programs in the country, with 275+/- staff and volunteers. It grew to become a year-round, multi-sport organization. In 2006 the ASF board of directors approved the construction of an 8,000 Sq. Ft. building directly on the slopes and named it The Gwen Allard Adaptive Sports Center. That building has since been enlarged and now has a dedicated chair lift serving it.

DS-USA: During the early 1980's Disabled Sports USA was the only group conducting Adaptive exams, and Gwen became a DS-USA examiner. As the need for more qualified instructors grew, she proposed that PSIA recognize Adaptive as a primary discipline and take over the administration of training and exams, using DS-USA's certification standards, which she helped to update; and this was approved by PSIA and DS-USA boards. Gwen went on to serve as the first Chairman of Both Eastern and National Adaptive committees.

She established a core group of Adaptive leaders to be the first PSIA examiners; and a national training event was held at A-Basin/Winter Park for these new clinicians/examiners.

"Ski Spectacular", A DS-USA event held annually in Breckenridge, CO, added an instructor training component, coordinated by Gwen. She later was successful in getting PSIA/AASI to recognize the event as the Annual Adaptive Academy.

DOUBLE H Ranch: In 1996, theme park pioneer, Charlie Woods, invited Gwen to the Double H Hole in the Woods Ranch, a summer camp in Luzerne, NY for critically ill children, run by Woods and actor, Paul Newman. He wanted to know if a small abandoned ski area on the property had potential to be the base for an Adaptive winter program. Gwen, who by this time was well known in the snowsports industry, went to work. She called on PSIA, NSP, NSAA, and suppliers to help and received hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of grooming equipment, snow making, skis, boards, boots, cable, reconstruction, etc. She put together a ski and snowboard staff and a volunteer ski patrol was established, as well as support staff and medical personnel. The program grew quickly, necessitating expansion of the base lodge, and then a new Inn more suitable for winter lodging. Gwen went to bat again in a campaign to add a Magic Carpet to the operation.

This program, open only to critically ill kids, is totally free, and may be unique in the world. It now has 235+/- staff and volunteers, plus Gwen, who has remained as a consultant.

Gwen has been fortunate to work with many Adaptive pioneers, such as Hal O'Leary, Kirk Bauer, Bruce Gavett, and Doug Pringle, to mention a few. She counts numerous Hall inductees as friends, mentors, co-workers, business associates, and acquaintances, because her work in snowsports has brought them together at various times in her career.

She has often been interviewed by all forms of media, including magazines, newspapers, and TV.

"Can't" and "Don't" are not in her vocabulary; and she believes that if you can dream it you can do it. She has an uncanny ability to bring together disparate individuals and groups to achieve a desired goal.

They call her "Mom" at the programs she has established. She also has functioned as an unofficial "Matchmaker" to her staff and volunteers, resulting in many marriages!

At 83, Gwen is still active as a consultant although COVID-19 has restricted most Adaptive operations this past season.

To Whom It May Concern:

It is my honor and pleasure to contact you on behalf of Gwen Allard and her nomination to the U.S. Ski and Snowboard Hall of Fame. Gwen's love of skiing began very early in life. As most people who are lifetime skiers, Gwen fell in love with being outside in the winter, the social aspect of the sport and that special feeling of freedom one gets making perfect turns down a corduroy trail. However, little did Gwen know 75 years ago when she took those first turns what an impact skiing would have on her life and how she be responsible for changing so many lives through this very special sport.

In the season of 1983/84, a decade before the Americans with Disabilities Act, two decades before "mainstreaming in schools" became mainstream, years before handicapped parking was the norm, Gwen discovered after realizing through her own son's disabilities; there was a population that would significantly benefit from learning the sport of skiing. She was given an opportunity to "research" the possibility of teaching skiing to people with disabilities by the Professional Ski Instructors of America - Eastern Education Foundation. Gwen found a home for her R&D project at what was then called, Ski Windham. Although totally not convinced this could work, Gwen found an empathetic ski area manager in Dan Frank and an equally empathetic customer base that was willing to support Gwen's vision of bringing skiing to the disabled community.

What started out in the season of 83/84 as a R&D project titled Ski Windham Adaptive Program (SWAP) with a group of students from a local ARC center and a few good hearted volunteers, blossomed into a world renowned adaptive sports program now known as the Adaptive Sports Foundation (ASF). The saying, "build it and they will come" definitely applies to Gwen Allard's vision of providing snowsports to people with disabilities. Since 1984, the ASF has provided 67,730 adaptive ski & snowboard lessons which allowed 10,500 individuals lead healthier and more active lives. These thousands of individuals can trace their success, life changing experiences and love of skiing and snowboarding directly back to Gwen Allard and her vision of opening the slopes up to all!

Through the past 35 years, Gwen was a trailblazer in bringing adaptive snowsports to the forefront. She worked tirelessly with the Professional Ski Instructors of America (PSIA) to standardize adaptive ski and later snowboard instruction developing teaching progressions which are used nationwide today by thousands of adaptive snowsports instructors. Gwen fought to have strong certification programs throughout (PSIA) and personally mentored many of PSIA's current leading adaptive snowsports educators. Hundreds of instructors can trace their initial interest in learning how to teach adaptive snowsports directly to Gwen. She never missed an opportunity to recruit another disciple to the ranks of adaptive ski teaching.

Back to the Adaptive Sports Foundation, thanks to Gwen's always forward thinking philosophy, an 8,000 square foot Center that bears her name was opened in 2005 slopeside to Windham Mountain Resort. From this center, besides the thousands of children, adults, wounded United States military veterans and family members who have been served, it has also produced two United States Paralympians who have competed in three Winter Paralympics in Alpine Skiing, two X Games competitors and multiple National Champions in Alpine skiing and snowboarding. Gwen's legacy is best felt at the Gwen Allard Adaptive Sports Center on a daily basis. Each day a child, adult, family member, or wounded United States veteran pulls up to the front of the building and passes under the Gwen Allard Adaptive Sports Center sign, they may not know it yet, but their life is about to change for the better. Gwen's inspiration of bringing snowsports to anyone willing to try is alive and well in Windham, NY and continues to impact thousands each year.

To Whom It May Concern,

In my capacity as CEO of the Double H Ranch, a not-for-profit organization that provides year-round support and specialized program services for children and families dealing with life threatening illnesses, I have had the distinct privilege of working closely with Gwen Allard since 1997. Our organization was founded in 1992 by Paul Newman and Charley Wood with a goal of creating life changing experiences for children who were diagnosed with serious illnesses such as cancer, serious blood disorders and neuromuscular impairments. We initially created a summer residential camping program for our eligible campers and our Board of Directors was determined to expand our services to include year-round support for our families. In 1997, our founders decided that we should research the possibility of restoring an existing two-person chair lift that was located on our property but hadn't been utilized for decades. The thought of providing a unique and privatized winter sports program at the Double H Ranch seemed ambitious to say the least and we had no clue as to how to establish such a specialized program.

We reached out to the Professional Ski Instructors of America in 1997 and it was Gwen Allard who came out to our site to evaluate what the possibilities might be for us in moving forward with an adaptive winter sports program. Gwen was immediately taken with the site and not only did she encourage us to move forward, but she became our guiding light and visionary from day one. Through her contacts, Gwen was able to secure the needed support from the ski industry to refurbish our lift and to put all the required pieces together, including the recruitment and training of qualified instructors. Gwen's expertise in the field of adaptive winter sports was truly the catalyst for our organization to develop a one of a kind program in the beautiful Adirondack mountains. We officially opened the adaptive winter sports program in 1998 and the program has grown in capacity each and every year. We currently have approximately 200 ski and snowboard instructors who volunteer their time and expertise in teaching our children a lifetime sport. We have two trails and one is named in honor of Gwen and it is called Gwen's Fun Run. In addition to the ski lift, we have a conveyor lift, four airless snow guns, a groomer and all the adaptive equipment a program could ever hope for in implementing such a specialized program. Gwen has developed an advanced training curriculum for our program with an emphasis on safety. Her ability to recognize ways to improve the instructor training skills of our volunteers is a gift to all of us and a direct benefit to our students. Gwen has been actively and enthusiastically involved with our adaptive winter sports program since inception and it will most definitely be part of her remarkable legacy in the field of adaptive sports throughout the country. Gwen is highly respected by everyone at the Double H Ranch and she has been a humble and caring source of strength. It is with the highest respect and privilege that I formally submit this nomination for Gwen Allard to become inducted into the US Ski and Snowboard Hall of Fame.

Respectfully submitted,

To the Selection Committee
U.S. Ski and Snowboard Hall of Fame

Few ski and snowboard pioneers had as much impact, and served with such humility, as Gwen Allard. Gwen and I were colleagues from 1989—when I began my tour with the Professional Ski Instructors of America as Marketing Director—through 2015 as Chief Executive Officer of the Professional Ski Instructors of America and the American Association of Snowboard Instructors (PSIA-AASI).

Her resume is impressive, but what should be noted is how she brings different and sometimes competing groups together. While spearheading Disabled Sports USA's Ski Spectacular in Breckenridge, Gwen ensured PSIA-AASI and its cadre of instructors were welcomed into the ranks of adaptive coaches. This unprecedented sharing of information and camaraderie paved the way for the USA to introduce adaptive snowsports to the international stage during the last three Interski congresses—reaching thousands of instructors from 36 countries—at a time when teaching the adaptive population was an afterthought, if thought of at all, around the world.

Another example of Gwen's foresight is a story of her time at the Double H Ranch. Adaptive instructors typically volunteer in schools run by charitable organizations and are not PSIA-AASI members. Most school directors do not have ready access to sufficient resources to improve instructor teaching skills. PSIA-AASI's model was to sell training materials to volunteers—as it does for paid instructors—but only 300 adaptive instruction manuals were sold annually. Instead of destroying the manuals, Gwen was open to piloting a plan to raise funds through the PSIA-AASI education foundation and donate these resources to qualified 501(c) 3 adaptive programs. Under Gwen's leadership, Double H Ranch was the first to sign up and test a PSIA-AASI program that ultimately reached:

- 70 501(c) 3 organizations, 10,837 adaptive instructors (588 paid/10,249 volunteer), and 20,016 students (representing 193,573 teaching hours from volunteers).
 - 9,279 were NOT PSIA-AASI members.
- 42 million households in one season via a segment about adaptive instruction aired in PSIA-AASI's Go With A Pro TV show.

Gwen Allard is a generous, humble, dedicated, persistent, and devoted force in snowsports. Adaptive programs help change lives one person, one family, at a time, whether it's a person's first time on snow, an athlete's journey to reach the top at the Paralympics, or a wounded warrior's discovery of new abilities and possibilities.

It is because of Gwen that these programs have legitimacy in ski and snowboard schools worldwide, and she deserves a place in the United States Ski and Snowboard Hall of Fame.

To: U.S. National Ski & Snowboard Hall of Fame

This letter is an enthusiastic endorsement of the nomination of Gwen Allard to the U.S. National Ski & Snowboard Hall of Fame. There are only a small handful of people who are truly national pioneers and leaders in the development and universal acceptance of adaptive snowsports in the USA; and Gwen Allard is without any doubt one of those pioneers and leaders.

In the 1970's, when adaptive snowsports was just beginning to be introduced, Gwen realized early on that development of standardized, professional teaching methods and training of snowsports instructors, was key to the safe, effective and successful expansion of this specialty.

With that as her guide, she has spent the past 40+ years using her positions within Professional Ski Instructors of America (now Professional Ski Instructors of America & American Association of Snowboard Instructors) as a platform to develop the sport. She did this as a Professional Ski Instructor at Gore MT. NY, then as Director of Eastern Professional Ski Instructors Association, and as director of its Foundation; and then with Adaptive Sports Foundation at Windham NY, Disabled Sports USA and also the Hole in the Woods Organization. She has also served on several national boards and committees seeking to expand Adaptive Snowsports.

In all instances, Gwen has always sought to work cooperatively with leaders and activists within the snowsports world to achieve her dream; never seeking the limelight, but only interested in success for the programs through partnerships and cooperation.

In the 1980's and early to mid-1990's, she was one of the pioneers who led the effort to incorporate Adaptive Snowsports teaching disciplines nationally through all Divisions of PSIA-AASI. As Director of Disabled Sports USA, one of the national partners Gwen enlisted in this effort, I found Gwen to be the ultimate professional, who was very clear and disciplined in her approach and who was always giving others credit and encouragement in this effort.

Adaptive Snowsports is now universally taught throughout the USA; and hundreds of thousands of people with disabilities can thank Gwen Allard for this opportunity. Please select this worthy pioneer into your ranks.

Sincerely,

Dear Selection Committee Members,

Please accept this letter of support for the nomination of Gwen Allard as an inductee into the US Ski and Snowboard Hall of Fame. Gwen's passion and actions have positively influenced the adapted snowsports movement and industry from the east coast to the west coast for decades.

Gwen's unparalleled thirst for knowledge as a prospective instructor of adapted alpine skiing fueled her initial quest to seek education wherever possible, which was a challenge when little formal information was available and the idea of teaching skiing to people with physical or cognitive diagnoses was far from mainstream acceptance. As Gwen expanded her own knowledge and skills, she recognized the need to provide information, materials and experiences to future instructors in adapted skiing to increase guest safety, reach the guest in their personal learning arena, and help shape meaningful experiences for both learner and instructor. To that end Gwen created regional training programs, educational materials, and guides for instructors seeking more information. Gwen did not limit these materials and educational opportunities to instructors in the ski school in which she worked or in the non-profit adapted sports programs she created and administered in the northeast; she welcomed all who wanted to learn.

Gwen was destined to become a passionate and engaged leader beyond her corner of the country. When the American's with Disabilities Act came into being, Gwen's didactic approach meant that she could help industry stakeholders such as Resorts, Professional Ski Instructors of America (PSIA) divisions, PSIA National, and independent non-profit adaptive programs learn about the intricacies of the law and how to uphold its intent with regard to snowsports access and services to guests with disabilities as well as its application to ski instructors with disabilities wishing to access education and employment. Over the years Gwen also immersed herself in numerous industry entities, thought groups and disability action committees with the focus of developing understanding and partnerships among them to ultimately serve people with disabilities who chose to engage in snowsports.

When resorts and non-profit schools began to embrace guests with disabilities Gwen recognized the need for consistent training and, with other industry leaders, brought adapted skiing into the PSIA family of snowsports disciplines. She designed PSIA national certification standards, established the first PSIA Academy for Adapted Snowsports Examiners, launched PSIA divisional exchanges for examiners of adapted skiing, was instrumental in fostering a relationship between Disabled Sports USA (DSUSA) and PSIA National leading to a large DSUSA educational event being accepted as the PSIA National Adaptive Academy, and successfully lobbied PSIA to expand its National Alpine Demonstration Team to include adapted snowsports and a team member with a disability using adapted alpine skiing equipment. Gwen's involvement helped PSIA become a world leader in adapted snowsports.

Outstanding leaders possess many attributes and one that firmly belongs to Gwen is the ability to continually move conversation and action agendas forward. Gwen has been undaunted in these efforts even when colleagues and influencers in snowsports cautioned her to accept the status quo. This was never more apparent than when Gwen petitioned for the acceptance of instructors with disabilities as candidates in PSIA Alpine Level I, II and III exams. Over time, resolution to this issue has begun to manifest itself in the form of policies and processes instituted to protect the rights of all parties and limit unnecessary legal exposure to the question. Many of the initiatives Gwen pursued in the adapted snowsports industry have taken time and shared effort to develop and implement but Gwen always knew that if the conversation was not started, change could never occur.

Exceptional leaders understand that they cannot act alone, and Gwen has proven to be an amazing mentor to many individuals and organizations in the industry, encouraging and supporting the growth and development of these advocates to take adapted snowsports into the future.

Gwen Allard has the personal and professional characteristics, accomplishments, and respect from her colleagues in the snowsport industry that your committee would deem admirable in a nominee and I highly encourage you to induct Gwen into the US Ski and Snowboard Hall of Fame.

Sincerely,
